Summary: From the two-time Booker Prize winner: an exhilarating, exceedingly timely new novel—at once dark, suspenseful, and seriously funny—that journeys to the place where the cyber underworld collides with international power politics.

When Gaby Baillieux released the Angel Worm virus into Australia's prison system, hundreds of asylum seekers walked free. And because the Americans run the prisons—as they do so many parts of her country—the doors of some 5,000 jails in the US also opened. Was...

Summary: A highly charged debut novel about a young woman in India, and the love that both shatters and transforms her.

She is twenty and restless in New Delhi. Her mother has died; her father has left for Singapore. He is a few years older, just back to India from New York. When they meet in a café one afternoon, she—lonely, hungry for experience, yearning to break free of tradition—casts aside her fears and throws herself headlong into a love affair, one that takes her where she has never been ...

Summary: From one of the most respected historians in America, twice the winner of the Pulitzer Prize, a new collection of essays that reflect a lifetime of erudition and accomplishments in history.

The past has always been elusive: how can we understand people whose worlds were utterly different from our own without imposing our own standards and hindsight? What did things feel like in the moment when outcomes were uncertain? How can we recover the uncertainties of the past, before the outcomes ...

Summary: A wildly charming comedic debut: a novel about a fake fakir who travels from India to France in order to shop at IKEA—and unwittingly embarks on a European tour that is certainly the first of its kind. (Swedish meatballs not included, but highly recommended.)

A fakir from rural India arrives in Paris with one goal: to get to IKEA. A professional con artist with only a counterfeit hundred-euro note in the pocket of his silk trousers, the fakir is confident that his usual bag of tricks is...

Summary: The poet Patrick Phillips joins our list with a stunning collection of elegies that bear witness to the small beauties and inevitable losses of our transient life. Elegy for a Broken Machine is a son’s lament for his father. It takes us from the luminous world of childhood to the fluorescent glare of operating rooms and recovery wards, and into the twilight lives of those who must go on. In one poem Phillips watches his sons play "Mercy" just as he did with his brother: hands laced, the ...

Summary: National Book Award Finalist
Stay, Illusion, the much-anticipated volume of poems by Lucie Brock-Broido, illuminates the broken but beautiful world she inhabits. Her poems are lit with magic and stark with truth: whether they speak from the imagined dwelling of her "Abandonarium," or from habitats where animals are farmed and harmed "humanely," or even from the surreal confines of death row, they find a voice like no other—dazzling, intimate, startling, heartbreaking.

Summary: The first biography of one of the most important poets in the second half of the twentieth century, whose life story is unparalleled in its narrative interest.

The story of James Merrill (1926-1995) is that of a young man escaping, but inevitably reproducing, the energies and obsessions of glamorous, powerful parents (his father founded Merrill Lynch); of a gay man inventing his identity against a shifting social and sexual backdrop; and of a brilliantly gifted poet testing the redemptiv...

Summary: From a legendary film critic and movie fan extraordinaire, the highlights reel of a life spent at the movies.

Richard Schickel has been going to the movies for more than seven decades (reviewing them since 1965), and, in that time, he's seen, by his own count, somewhere in the neighborhood of 18,750 films. Call it “obsession,” “lunacy,” or a “grand passion” (Schickel grants all three), but there's no one who knows film better than Schickel. Now he gives us the ultimate summing up: a hist...

Summary: An urgent, illuminating exploration of the social nature of shame, and of the ways in which it might be used, sparingly and pointedly, to promote political change and social reform.

In cultures that champion the individual, guilt is advertised as the cornerstone of conscience. Yet while guilt holds individuals to personal standards, it proves impotent in the face of corrupt corporate policies. In recent years, we have been asked to assuage our guilt about these problems as consumers, by ...

Summary: An outrageously stylish, wickedly funny debut of fashion in the digital age, this is the story of Imogen Tate, editor in chief of Glossy magazine, who finds her twenty-something former assistant, Eve Morton, plotting to reduce Glossy, famous for their lavish 367-page September issue, into an app—with herself at the helm, of course.

When Imogen returns to work after a summer leave, the Glossy offices are barely recognizable. Eve, fresh out of Harvard Business School, has fired "the ...

Summary: Here is the masterpiece by the father of the modern Spanish novel: a tour de force of nineteenth-century fiction, a tale of jealousy and adultery, set against a vividly drawn panorama of Madrid.

In Spain, Benito Pérez Galdós is revered as the heir to Cervantes, a literary giant read alongside Dickens, Balzac, Flaubert, and Tolstoy. Fortunata and Jacinta, first published in 1887, is his masterpiece. It tells the story of the two women in the life of Juanito Santa Cruz, restless heir to a ...

Benito Pérez Galdós was born in 1843 in the Canary Islands, but lived all his adult life in Madrid. He was a prolific writer who produced 77 novels and 21 plays, and achieved both popularity and critical acclaim for his work. He was consistently attacked in the right-wing Catholic press for his criticism of the Church’s influence in politics and its resistance to social reforms, and his political enemies sabotaged his chances of winning the Nobel Prize. In his sixties Galdós

Summary: Poignant, keenly observed, and irresistibly funny: a memoir about literary New York in the late nineties, a pre-digital world on the cusp of vanishing.

At twenty-three, after leaving graduate school to pursue her dreams of becoming a poet, Joanna Rakoff moves to New York City and takes a job as assistant to the storied literary agent for J. D. Salinger. She spends her days at a desk in a dimly lit wood-paneled office, where Dictaphones and typewriters still reign and old-time agents doze...
