First Edition

On the way to the taqueria, Pete daydreams about all the tasty tacos he's going to eat.

Pineapple.

Avocado.

Fish.

He wants them all!

HarperCollins

Oh no!
There is a problem.
The taqueria is closed!

"This is not groovy at all,"
Bob says. "Now what are we going to eat?"

Pete doesn't panic.
He knows what to do.

TrapperCollins

CLOSED
TODAY!

“Yeah!”

the family cheers.

“Let’s make our own tacos! Dad makes rad taco shells.
Bob is awesome at making salsa. And mom’s fish is far-out!”

Back at home, Bob, Mom, Dad, and Pete get right to work.

When the dough is ready, Pete starts to roll it into small balls. Then he has a better idea.

“Groovy!”

Bob says. “GIANT taco shells!”

Pete nods. “Now we can fill them with even more tasty treats!”

HarperCollins

Uh-oh. Dad forgot to go to the store!
They are all out of beans and cheese.

“NO worries,” Pete says. “We can use these instead!”

Collins

Bob fills his taco with pickles and bananas. Yum!

Dad fills his with berries and cream.

Mom makes a green taco: cucumbers, peppers, and broccoli.

It's Pete's turn to fill his taco. He chooses jelly beans and marshmallow fluff. Then he adds some of maple syrup.

"Sweet!" Pete says.

"Too sweet," Mom says.

Pete looks at his taco. Mom's right.
It needs something else. But what?

Pickles? No.

Mustard? No.

Then Pete sees what he wants. Anchovies!

Pete takes a big bite.

"Now that is one groovy taco,"
he says.

HarperCollins

Pete hears a knock on the door.
"What smells so good?" Callie asks.

"Can we try?" asks Gus.

Even Grumpy Toad
wants a taco.

Collins

"Wow! These tacos are out-of-sight!"
Callie shouts.

Grumpy Toad agrees.
"Best tacos I've ever had."

"We should do this every taco Tuesday," Mom says.

Pete grins. "Making tacos was fun . . ."

“... but I'd rather eat them!”
