

Jules Feiffer

Michael di Capua Books • HarperCollins Publishers

Smart
George

For Michael,
who counts

Text and pictures copyright © 2020 by Jules Feiffer
Library of Congress control number: 2019942171
HarperCollins Publishers, New York, NY 10007
Printed and bound by Phoenix Color
Designed by Steve Scott
First edition, 2020
20 21 22 23 24 25 PC 6 5 4 3 2 1

George’s mother said, “One plus one equals what, George?”

George said, "First, you have to feed me."

So she fed him.

Then George's mother said, "Two plus two equals what, George?"

George said, "First, you have to walk me."

So she walked him.

Then George's mother said, "Three plus three equals what, George?"

George said, "It's time for my nap."

While he napped, George dreamed about numbers.

I almost caught you passing the sixth tree.

I missed you by an inch at the seventh tree.

And now you're way out of reach up the eighth tree. I call that cheating.

You added up eight trees without even thinking. You are so smart, George!

Mother!

Will you come with my leash and pull me out of this dream!

One house

plus two houses

is three houses.

Smart
George.