

SOLUTIONS

1. “It was The Amazing Aureolin with a heavy candle in the enormous bathroom!” The Amazing Aureolin kept proclaiming her innocence, but she couldn’t resist Deductive Logico’s arguments. He was demonstrably correct.

So she all but confessed when she claimed, “No cell can hold me!”

The Amazing Aureolin | a heavy candle | the enormous bathroom

Midnight III | an aluminum pipe | the bedroom

Dame Obsidian | a fork | the screening room

2. “It was Father Mango with a harpoon in the docks!” At first, Father Mango argued. Then, he swore. Then, he cursed. Finally, he admitted defeat, saying, “How could you do this to a man of God?”

Miss Saffron | a bear trap | the ancient ruins

Signor Emerald | an ordinary brick | the cliffs

Father Mango | a harpoon | the docks

3. It was Captain Slate with a glass of poisoned wine in the entry hall! Logico really liked that he was getting to explain the precise details of the murder, because—again—it was obvious what they meant.

As Captain Slate realized she was going down, she muttered, “I should have stayed in space...”

Captain Slate | a glass of poisoned wine | the entry hall