

IF YOU SEE VULTURES CIRCLING ABOVE YOU, WALK IN THE OPPOSITE DIRECTION.

Birds like vultures circle over a fresh kill, meaning a predator might be around that won't have any problem adding you to their stats.

IF A SNAKE BITES YOU, LOOK AT THE WOUND.

Double set of teeth means it's nonvenomous. Two puncture holes means the snake is indeed venomous, so either seek medical attention or sneeze in the air and pray that God blesses you.

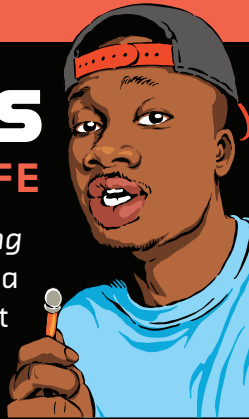

DON'T EVER WEAR CALVIN KLEIN "OBSESSION" IN AN ASIAN JUNGLE.

Big cats are attracted to musky smells, so you may attract a tiger. If you ever smell popcorn, do not go any further in the direction you are heading. Tigers mark their territory with urine and for some reason tiger pee smells like the buttered movie treat.

SURVIVAL TIPS THAT COULD SAVE YOUR LIFE

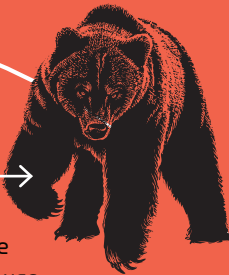

After writing *100 Animals That Can F*cking End You*, the least I could do is offer you a small lifeline. So here are some tips that didn't make it into the book:

HOW TO SURVIVE DIFFERENT BEARS

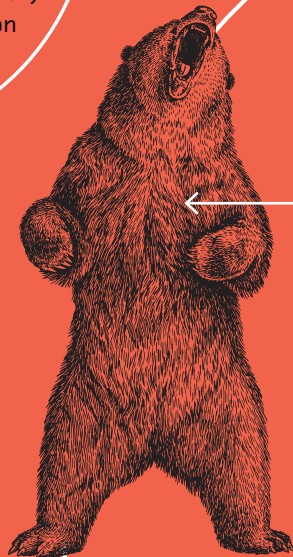

IF IT'S BLACK, ATTACK

Throw stones, hit 'em with a stick, scream as loud as you can. Black bears aren't that aggressive and they can be intimidated. Now the bear might accuse you of being a racist but at least you'll live. Don't try and climb a tree though 'cause he will catch you.

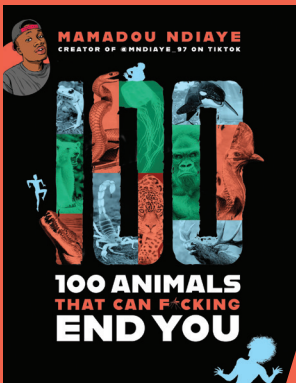

IF IT'S BROWN, GET ON THE GROUND

Intimidation doesn't really work when you're up against God's delete button. Play dead while protecting your head and neck. Grizzlies only attack when threatened so imitating a corpse might save you from becoming one. Don't run. Grizzlies can reach speeds of 35 miles per hour.

IF IT'S WHITE, COFFIN'S SEALED TIGHT

... and you're gonna need a closed casket. You can't make yourself look big because the bear is bigger. You can't play dead cause you'll just get eaten alive. If a polar bear comes at you—first of all what are you doing there?—take off pieces of clothing. The bear will stop to inspect them, giving you a few precious seconds to escape.
